NEIL TRIERWEILER

Lighting Cameraman

SUMMARY:

I began my career at a London broadcast facilities company where I received five years of training. During this time I gained valuable technical knowledge of engineering and maintenance of all types of broadcast cameras and other professional equipment. Alongside this technical training I was able to work across the industry on a variety of studio, PSC/ENG and multi camera/OB productions. The knowledge I acquired whilst at the facilities company prepared me for a freelance career as a Lighting Cameraman, which I began on 4th July 2000.

My freelance career has been wide ranging, increasing my knowledge and experience on many different production types and locations. I have been fortunate to work with lots of talented crews and production teams from across the world, where I have found being bilingual a real asset. I have built a reputation for working in a calm and fun way, being diverse and a good team player. I am reliable, bond quickly with people and understand the pressures of those I work with. I have good attention to small details and enjoy being artistic/experimental and technical.

Presently I am learning to fly radio control drones and helicopters in order to offer another "view" which is often overlooked.

I am a BECTU member with £10 million worldwide public liability insurance and a member of the Guild of Television Cameramen. I also hold a UK press card.
